

To the rescue

We will always find 2003 a most memorable year. People at the wrong time at the wrong place will remember. Travelers were beset by transportation difficulties of mammoth proportions, that made connections and departures a whirlwind of unpredictable inconveniences. Some of it was due to weather of every description. The tornado outbreak of May was something else. August of 2003 handed a blackout. September of 2003 gave us a crazy hurricane. The next two pictures are scenes from Europe of a horrific heat wave that struck Switzerland (the fire), and all of Western Europe. On your left are the Colorado fires.

No matter what is out there, you will always find a skeptic hither and yond, however, to you the avant-garde listener of Coast to Coast AM, this is no dream or imagination. And things have ebbed closer to the unbelievable, that by now, those who have been listening to programs going back to the early days with Art

Summer in France, a portable morgue. The heat wave was so tremendous it killed in France 15,000--THE SIZE OF AN AMERICAN ARMY DIVISION OF WORLD WAR II.

Bell have lived the changes as history. With a war against terrorism it gets really tough.

We must work together during every crisis.

It is an entire regalia of profound changes. The evidence may be registered in the mind, yet with the passing of time, dates and places and people and events turn nebulous. To help remember the introspective peculiarities of weather change, was the reason for my new book, Alert: For The Times. Believe me, many things were mentioned months ago on Coast To Coast with Art Bell, and now with George Noory. It is not so easy to remember it all. I present my book and this special section not available to the general public . . . showing the climate changes to remember.

Don't get stuck.
